

Have an idea for a scholarly publication or creative work?

Need to restart an abandoned project, or publish for promotion or tenure?

Want to explore different methodology—perhaps the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (SoTL), to turn a learning success into a publication?

CAFE invites any faculty member who wishes to complete a scholarship project to join a pilot Faculty Learning Community. A small group of goal-oriented faculty will learn and work together over the course of a year. Participants will plan their schedule collaboratively with the facilitators. We envision the group meeting to learn about scholarship and productivity methods, and putting them into practice. The group might choose to have invited speakers, readings in common, work sessions, and/or to establish accountability among its members.

All of this has a single goal: to produce a scholarly, peer-reviewed product.
